A Brief Overview of Audiovisual Materials

The content of the audiovisual materials in AHC collections takes many forms, including but not limited to oral histories, radio broadcast recordings, local television news, public access programming, documentaries, home movies, and music videos and live performances by local bands. The majority of this content is contained on video tape, but many AHC collections also contain motion picture film and born digital content. Some collections have been partially or completely digitized, but the vast majority of AV materials in AHC's collections have no digital surrogate. In these cases, arrangements must be made in advance for access to these materials. To the extent possible, access copy availability has been noted below. A detailed list of digitized items can be found in the Digitized Video database, the Oral History and Audio Recordings database, a collection's finding aid and A/V inventory spreadsheet.

Archives and Manuscripts Collection

Audiovisual materials abound in AHC Archives and Manuscripts collections. While only a few of these collections are comprised exclusively of AV, there are many collections with AV materials in them. Digitization of AV items in Archives and Manuscripts collections is an ongoing process.

The Archives and Manuscripts Collection contains primary research materials about people, organizations, governments, and businesses in Austin and Travis County. The collections with audiovisual materials are listed below, arranged by call number with an indication of the kind of AV contained in the collection, if available. For detailed information about specific collections, please refer to the archives finding aids located in the Reading Room or online at Texas Archival Resources Online (TARO).

Unless indicated otherwise, access to audiovisual recordings requires advanced notice.

AUSTIN FILES – House/Building: Audiovisual Recordings

The Austin Files – House/Building contains clippings, reports, audiovisual recordings and ephemera related to structures in Austin and Travis County. Arranged by street address. An * after the item number below indicates that a digital access copy is available.

[illegible]

General Collection

The General Collection contains books, pamphlets, local government reports and audiovisual materials like movies, documentaries, and music. Titles are arranged by call number.

This list is by no means an exhaustive list of every title held by the Austin History Center that relates to audiovisual resources; that can be accomplished by a keyword search in the Austin Public Library online catalog. Note: because of the size of the Austin History Center's music collection (CDs, LPs), audio recordings of musical groups are not listed below.

The list below identifies General Collection audiovisual items that may be unique or otherwise noteworthy for their contribution to a diverse understanding of the history of Austin. General collection audiovisual items are available for viewing in the Austin History Center reading room.

Recordings Collection – AUDIO

The Audio Recordings Collection contains individual audio recordings donated or acquired by the Austin History Center and consists of presentations, sermons, lectures, music, radio broadcasts and other miscellaneous audio recordings. The oral histories that used to be a part of the Audio Recordings Collection has been moved to a separate collection called the Austin History Center Oral History Collection, the inventory of which can be found below.

The list below is of audio recordings in order by recording number – a list in alphabetical by subject and then by interviewee last name is available on the Austin History Center website.

Many of the oral histories have been transcribed and copies placed in AF-biography files. To listen to a recording, a digital copy must be available. If the audio is only available on cassette or open reel audio, a digitization request must be made in order to listen to the recording. A request can be made at the Austin History Center reading room or by contacting the Audiovisual Archivist.
